A Message from our Chair

The year 2016 saw more and more people seeking help from the Simon Communities all around the country. The homeless and housing crisis escalated further with the numbers in emergency accommodation increasing month after month. There are at least 90,000 people on the social housing waiting list and rents continued their upward spiral. At the time of writing, there are nearly 8,500 people trapped in emergency accommodation. The length of time people remain there has increased considerably, with many stuck there for months or even years. Access to affordable housing is a major challenge, preventing people moving out of emergency accommodation. Housing is the key to addressing homelessness but it’s not just about housing; providing people with supports to help address whatever other needs surround their experience of homelessness is also essential.

For nearly 50 years the Simon Communities have not only provided much needed services and housing for thousands of people experiencing the trauma and stress of homelessness, but have also campaigned to make sure the State recognises this injustice and responds with more effective policies and appropriate legislation. Our key focus is working with people to address their immediate issues while also supporting them to plan for their future. In 2016, the Simon Communities worked with over 11,000 people around the country. The work in the National Office focuses on policy, communications and campaigning; national fundraising partnerships; and best practice and training. Some of the key moments you will see highlighted in our review are Simon Week, the establishment of the Needs of Women in Services Group and the RIAI Simon Open Door fundraising campaign.

I would like to thank all the people who use our services around the country; their courage and tenacity is remarkable. To all of the staff and volunteers across the eight local Simon Communities, we could not continue without your hard work and dedication. I would like to thank the Board of the Simon Communities of Ireland for their guidance and support and to acknowledge the excellent work and commitment of the team in National Office over the last year.

We in the Simon Communities are doing all we can to address the ongoing homeless and housing crisis. Preventing homelessness and keeping people in their homes; access to appropriate and affordable housing; and the provision of support in housing are key to ensuring that people can leave homelessness behind for good. We could not do that without the support of so many different people and organisations. On behalf of the people we work with, our staff and volunteers, we would like to thank our statutory funders, loyal donors and all our supporters for their generosity this year. Across the country, with you by our side, we continue to ensure that whatever the issue, for as long as it is needed, our door is always open.

DERMOT KAVANAGH
Weathering the storm: looking back on 2017

It is hard to look back on 2017 as another year when the housing and homelessness crisis continued to worsen; even more troubling are the recent comments from the Minister for Housing Eoghan Murphy that this will continue before getting better. Homelessness and housing insecurity is never normal, it is never acceptable. The New Year will ring in with more than 5,000 adults and 3,000 children living in emergency accommodation, several hundred sleeping rough on our streets and many thousands more trapped in housing insecurity. With the sheer scale of the crisis, it is important to remember that these numbers reflect real people and families trying to get on with their lives in very difficult circumstances. Every person has their own story; what is common to all is that homeless and housing insecurity is traumatic, stressful and filled with uncertainty. The Government can and must do better in 2018. The Simon Communities will support this in any way we can.

The number of people who are homeless has increased by 127% since 2011, according to Census data published in August. The data clearly showed people who are homeless, like the rest of the population, represent a wide range of experiences and a broad spectrum of people - single people, families, women, young people, children and drug/alcohol users who are homeless. Of particular note were the increases in young people, women and families who are becoming homeless. The Census data also gave us an insight into the extent of hidden homelessness in Ireland. One in ten people are living in accommodation of less than one room per person, a rise of 28% since the Census of 2011. This shows what the Simon Communities are seeing all around the country; people living in overcrowded accommodation because they cannot access secure social and affordable housing. The real impact of austerity and recession is clear – 55% of people who are homeless are in the labour force. Structural inequality and poverty are at the root of homelessness.

Soon after his appointment in June, Minister Eoghan Murphy announced a review of Rebuilding Ireland. The Simon Communities made a submission to this review, suggesting improvements to deliver secure, social and affordable housing across all tenure types within sustainable communities nationwide; to prevent more people from becoming homeless; and to address the complex or multiple needs that can be a cause or consequence of homelessness. However, this requires acknowledgment by the Government that increased housing supply will not impact affordability in short to medium term. The market cannot deliver the required housing mix; therefore, there must be a move away from private sector reliance and the commodification of housing. It is essential to act on the options that can deliver homes quickly such as empty homes and rapid... build housing. Just under 190,000 homes lie empty in Ireland, more than enough to house people living in emergency accommodation. Almost 11% of total housing stock is vacant in Ireland, almost twice the level expected in a functioning housing market. The potential to deliver much needed housing supply quickly is significant. In spring of this year, the Simon Communities published a range of solutions to address vacant and derelict homes in a 10-Point Plan to contribute to the development of the Vacant Housing Re-Use Strategy. The Government was due to publish the Strategy before summer. At the time of writing, that Strategy remains unpublished.

Ensuring that we never experience a crisis such as this again is a key priority of the Simon Communities. To this end in July, the Simon Communities, in conjunction with Mercy Law Resource Centre and Senator Colette Kelleher held a seminar in Trinity College, A Right to Housing. Were Ireland to enshrine the right to housing in the Constitution, this would mean acceptance that everyone is entitled to adequate and decent housing as a right, which could be enforced and upheld. This would provide a clear floor of protection in respect of access to basic adequate housing for all and the State would be obliged to ensure an adequate supply of social and affordable housing, with support as needed.

People in Ireland care deeply have about the injustice and indignity of homelessness and housing instability, and the long-lasting impact on the lives of individuals, families and children. Throughout ex-Hurricane Ophelia in October, as the Simon Communities and other organisations worked together to keep people safe, members of the public asked numerous questions about how the Government planned to ensure the safety of those who had no shelter. The awful irony of advising people to stay home, when we have the greatest homelessness crisis of modern times, was not lost on people.

The huge public concern about these issues is clear to us every day in our work in the Simon Communities; the support we receive is humbling. People want action. We hope that the Government hears what thousands of people standing with us are saying. It is not fair or sustainable to keep offering people short-term solutions with little attention paid to their longer-term needs. In the meantime, the Simon Communities all around the country continue the work that first began almost 50 years ago, providing support and services to 11,000 people and advocating for change. With your continued support, we will be there, our door is always open, for as long as people need us.

Policy, Research and Communications

The Simon Communities of Ireland works to influence Government and key policy and decision makers with our policy and campaigning; research; and communications activities. We engage with key stakeholders involved in shaping national housing and homeless policy and other policy areas which impact on the lives of people who are homeless and living with housing insecurity e.g. health policy, drug and alcohol policy. We are committed to evidence informed policy making and we engage in purposeful research to support our policy activities and to influence service delivery across the country.

In 2016 the Simon Communities of Ireland are represented in all major national policy fora and at key stakeholder meetings including the National Homeless Consultative Committee (NHCC), the Data Subgroup of the NHCC and bilateral Meetings with the Department of the Housing, Planning, Community and Local Government.

Throughout the year, we participated in a range of partnerships and networks with other organisations that share our aims including Mental Health Reform, Community & Voluntary Pillar, the European Anti-Poverty Network and the Children’s Rights Alliance. We are also active members of the European Federation of National Organisations Working with the Homeless (FEANTSA) and were nominated onto the FEANTSA Expert Working Group on Health in 2011.

Our communications work supports our policy and campaigning activities where we aim to increase awareness of homelessness and associated issues as well as the work of the Simon Communities throughout the country. Throughout the year, we reached thousands of people through significant media coverage; there was over 800 national press articles and over 700 broadcast features in 2016 alone. The role of National Spokesperson is supported from within the National Office speaking on behalf of all eight Simon Communities on national policy and strategy matters.
Simon Week 2016

In September 2016 our annual week of campaigning and awareness raising – Simon Week – took place involving a wide range of activities and events at a national and local level. This year we asked people to support our Cut the Red Tape campaign. This campaign gained huge public support urging the Government to remove the everyday red tape and system failures that are pushing people into housing insecurity, homelessness and preventing people from leaving homelessness behind. These issues act as significant barriers for people in their efforts to find their way out of the housing and homeless crisis.

Election 2016

In the run up to Election 2016, we ran our Ask About Housing campaign encouraging the public to ask local candidates what they would do about housing if elected. We provided three questions for people to encourage them to engage candidates on these issues. The Simon Communities also had a candidate pledge, which was signed by most political parties and their leaders, committing to prioritising housing and homelessness by resourcing the solutions required to meet people’s longer term needs through the implementation of a Housing First approach – ensuring access to affordable, secure housing with support as required.

Reports and Policy Submissions

This year we published the following key reports and policy submissions -

Locked Out of the Market – This series of snapshot reports track the gap between rising market rents and the Rent Supplement / Housing Assistance Payment (HAP) limits, which had remained unchanged from June 2013 to June 2016. By tracking the number of properties available to rent within these state support limits in ten regions throughout the country, the studies show just how far these payments are from market rates and how people on state housing supports cannot access the private rental market. We published three Locked Out reports in 2016.

A number of submissions were made during 2016 including:

- Election Manifesto Document.
- Submission to the Oireachtas Committee on Housing and Homelessness.
- Submission to the Oireachtas Committee on the Future of Healthcare.
- Submission to Inform the Department of Social Protection’s Statement of Strategy 2016-2019.
- Submission to Inform the National Drugs Strategy.
- Submission to Inform the Private Rental Strategy.
- Submission to the Pre Budget Forum.
- Simon Communities Pre-Budget Submission 2017.
Best Practice and Training

• Developing and delivering training.

• Auditing services and researching and disseminating best practice initiatives.
‘PEER TRAINER’ TRAINING AND NATIONAL CLIENT WORKSHOP

Building on the success of their enterprises in 2015, Simon Involvement and Action Group - SIAG (SIAG is a client led group for clients of Simon nationally) organised training for their members to become Peer Trainers. This training was delivered over two months in the summer. The training was in preparation for the ‘Let’s Get Together’ event in November.

‘Let’s Get Together’ was significant in that it was run by clients, for clients. The aim was to deliver workshops on the opportunities for clients to participate in their services, to inform and to inspire. Clients who had attended the Peer Trainer training ran a series of workshops. From the evaluation survey after the event it was clear that these workshops were very successful and of value to the participants.

SIMON VOICES

Simon Involvement and Action Group produced two bumper issues of the newsletter Simon Voices, written by clients for clients, making it a unique publication. Article topics included:

DEVELOPMENT OF THE NEEDS OF WOMEN IN SERVICES NATIONAL GROUP

In 2016 the ‘Needs of Women in Services’ group was formed. This national staff group meets bi monthly and its purpose is to promote the inclusion of initiatives and services to meet the specific needs of women in all strategic planning and service development, in the local Communities.
